

Ever since I was young I was deficient of rules and their consequences, which of course laid the foundation for my current anger, depression and violent nature. These feelings and sufferings have found their greatest amplifications in school where the rules and restrictions are the most numerous and strict. However, I am not sure that it would be accurate to say that these feelings have been continually escalating. No, it is accurate to say that, but my ability to conceal these thoughts and feelings increased as my want/need to kill people increased.

My suicidal thoughts, my murderous thoughts

Never once did I believe killing a man is wrong.

No, no killing out of cold blood is wrong.
